The ultimate Australia Day celebration – Australia Day Live 2010

There is nothing more Aussie than kicking off your Australia Day festivities with the Australia Day Live concert, to be held on Monday 25th January 2010 on the lawns of Parliament House in Canberra.

Australia Day Live is back and bigger than ever in 2010 and will feature some of Australia's greatest home grown music talent in concert. This year the crowd will be rocking to Aria award winning Bertie Blackman, top 40 star Cassie Davis, and the unforgettable blues sound of Ian Moss.

"It's great that Australia Day Live is back again in 2010, the symbolism of the event and the patriotic community spirit that surrounds it, is what makes this event unique and truly spectacular" said Warren Pearson, Chief Executive Officer of National Australia Day Council.

A huge turn out is expected for the evening's entertainment, with last year's concert generating a capacity crowd of 35,000 people. The celebrations will commence at 5.45pm with the Australian of the Year Awards, followed by the Australia Day Live Concert.

This year the concert will feature a diverse star-studded line up of artists covering all music genres from rock, pop and top 40 hits. The full line up will be announced in the coming weeks.

Make sure you put Australia Day Live in your diary for 2010 and come and join the ultimate celebration about what it means to be Australian on Monday 25th January.
